INDEX

OF

THE CASTES AND SUB-CASTES

RETURNED IN

THE SCHEDULES AT THE PUNJAB CENSUS, 1891.

The schedules, on which particulars regarding each individual were returned, contained two columns in which the particulars regarding caste were entered. In the former of these two columns the main caste or tribe (translated by qaum) was entered: and in the latter the sub-caste or clan (qaum ki shákh). The enumerators were instructed as follows regarding the filling up of these two columns:—

Column 4 (Caste, &c.).—In this column enter the caste or tribe:—

As Brahman, Rajput, Khatri, Jat, Arora, Gujar, Biloch, Pathan, Kauet, Chamar, &c. Do not enter vague terms as Marwari, Karar, Hindki, Pahari, Arya, &c. For Christians enter the race as Native, Eurasian, European, Armenian, &c.

Column 5 (Sub-division of caste).—Here show the division of the tribe or caste under which the people ordinarily class themselves:—

As Gaur, Sarsut for Brahmans; Tiwana, Syal, Chauhan, &c., for Rajputs; Sandhu, Virkh, &c., for Jats; Yusufzai, Khattak, &c., for Pathans. For females record the sub-division as stated by the persons with whom they are living. Where no sub-division is returned, repeat the entry in column 4; but do not leave this column blank. For Native and Eurasian Christians enter in this column the caste or other designation, if any, which they themselves return; but if they return no entry for this column, repeat the entry in column 4. For Europeans return the nationality, as English, Irish, American, French, &c.

And the following additional instructions were given to the supervisors who checked the entries of the enumerators:—

Column 4.—When persons of very low caste return themselves as belonging to some much higher caste, to which they obviously do not belong, you are at liberty to use your discretion about the caste entry. For instance, if a Teli says he is a Moghal or a Rajput, and obviously cannot be so, you may enter him as a Teli and not as a Moghal or Rajput. But you must only make such alterations in very obvious cases.

Column 5.—It is not intended that the sub-division of the tribe or caste shown in column 5 should be necessarily the next sub-division after the tribe or caste, as known to Mirasis or to historians. Column 5 should give the sub-divisions to which people commonly ascribe themselves. For instance, a Syal is a Rajput; and historians say he is a Punwar Rajput; but the entry for a Syal will be "column 4, Rajput; column 5, Syal" and not "column 4, Rajput; and column 5, Punwar," because the Syals always describe themselves as Syals and not as Punwars.

To the superior staff the following explanations and warnings were issued:—

Filling up of the Schedules.—It will be noticed that the same details of tribe and caste are not being taken at the present Census as were taken in 1881. The essential point to be observed is that the name by which a man's tribe or caste is commonly known must appear in one or other of the two columns. In making the vernacular translation of the schedule, it is impossible to use words defining exactly what is wanted which will be generally intelligible throughout the Province. The word "kaum" is intended to imply what we call the main caste or tribe, and the "shákh," as explained in the instructions, is the sub-division of the main tribe or caste to which the people commonly ascribe themselves. Great care should be taken to enter the names of religions, castes, languages, and occupations in the terms used by the persons who are being enumerated. Except where a discretion has been specially reserved to the Census Staff by the instructions, no attempt should be made to aim at uniformity by altering the names given. What is necessary in this direction will be done after the Census is over.

The figures recorded for sub-castes were not tabulated, except in one or two selected instances. The general rule was to take out figures for the main castes only. Tables showing the numbers recorded in each tahsil against each sub-caste were published after the Census of 1881: and detailed information regarding the strength of each sub-caste can, so far as the confused nature of the material admits, be ascertained by reference to those lists. The numerical strength of the sub-castes has therefore not been recorded in the present index.

Besides omitting the record of the numbers of each sub-caste, the following index differs in two other particulars from those published after the Census of 1881. In the schedules of the Census of 1881 there were three columns for caste, one to show the original caste or tribe (asl qaum), another to show the clan (sát gá firqah), and a third to show the Got or Family (got gá shákh). The lists of 1881, therefore, show particulars under three heads in cases where particulars under all three heads were recorded. Whereas this index makes no distinction between the various kinds of sub-divisions which come under the main castes or tribes, and which I have termed throughout "sub-castes." The omission of this extra classification is no doubt a considerable drawback to the scientific value of the index, but the attempt made in 1881 to secure the proper return of the clans and gots was found so difficult in practice that we had to abandon in 1891 any idea of securing more information than that supplied by the two columns noticed above.

A further matter in which the present index differs from those based on the Census of 1881, is this: that the latter were published separately by divisions, whereas that printed below has been prepared for the whole province. The index has little or no value for administrative purposes, but such value as it may possess as an addition to our ethnographical material, lies mainly in the fact that it presents the information it contains in a form in which it can be readily used.

In preparing this index I have excluded all entries in which the caste in question, or a synonym thereof, was not entered in the form of the two columns reserved in the schedules for the return of information relating to caste. The index, therefore, may be looked on as containing no entry that was not actually returned in the schedules at the census. I have included, for instance, all sub-castes returned under the caste Dhobí, or under Gázar which is a synonym for Dhobí, but I have ignored all entries in which the term Dhobí or a synonym thereof appeared in the second only of the two columns of the schedule or did not appear at all.

A number of the sub-castes returned are, on the face of them, pure nonsense, and if careful examination were made, a good deal more nonsense still would be elicited. When I consulted the Census Commissioner for India regarding the preparation of the index, he advised me to "cut out the rubbish." But I have refrained from doing this, because I cannot tell (and I do not know any one who could tell) what is rubbish and what is not; and if I am not to exclude all the rubbish, I would rather exclude none at all. The ethnologist or other scientific enquirer who may at any time make use of this index, will be in a better position to discriminate the useful from the useless in the information it contains. All I have ventured to do is to omit the cases in which the caste name has been returned both as a caste and a sub-caste: that is to say, the cases in which no sub-caste was returned.

The castes for which I collected details are those which we recorded in tabulation, the number and classification of which was subsequently somewhat altered. A number of castes tabulated were found to belong properly to some other caste, but as a rule the castes thus incorporated contained a very insignificant number of people. Where they are large or important enough, I have added details for them also, as well as for the castes which appear in our Caste Tables.

The transliteration has been conducted on a system prescribed by myself, the object of which is merely to give a separate form of letter for each separate consonant in the Urdu alphabet. The following are the exceptional letters with the transliteration adopted:—
viz.:—ڈ: d, ڈھ: dh, غ: gh, ق: q, خ: kh, ژ: r, ر: r, ث: t, ط: t, ت: t, ن: n, ظ: z, ز: z, ذ: z, ج: j, ز: zh. It must always be remembered that many of the words are not properly Urdu words, and that in any case they were liable to a considerable amount of misspelling before they were entered in the list. The pronunciation of the same word too often differs in different places, so that one and the same sub-caste not unfrequently appears two or three times in the index.

The preparation of the index has been a work of very considerable labour, and the result may not in some cases be perfectly accurate. They have been subjected to such check as was considered sufficient to make sure of their general accuracy: and though I have not thought it advisable to bestow on this index the very minute check which would have been required if it had been of as much practical importance as the rest of our work, yet it may be accepted as in the main showing the returns exactly as entered in the schedule.

The letter immediately following the names of the sub-caste denotes the religion:—

H. Hindu.	M. Musulman.	B. Buddhist.
S. Sikh.	Ch. Christian.	O. Others.
J. Jain.	P. Parsi.

The figures and letters following those which denote the religion, indicate the locality in which the sub-caste is found. The following is the interpretation thereof:—

This index has been prepared from the district caste lists described in my remarks on tabulation in Volume I. Each abstraction office prepared an index on the lines laid down, and from these and from the Native States' lists a provincial index was prepared in my office. The index was prepared in vernacular on a lithographed bilingual form, and the vernacular entries were then transliterated on the English half of the form, so that we had the vernacular and English entries immediately opposite each other. The index thus prepared were then cut into slips and re-arranged according to the English alphabetical order.
